I KNEW HOW IT WOULD BE.

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

'He'll never succeed!' was the remark of Mr Hueston, on reference being made to a young man named Eldridge, who had recently commenced business.

'Why not?' was asked.

'He's begun wrong.'

'In what way?'

'His connection is bad.'

'With Dalton?'

'Yes. Dalton is either a knave or a fool. The former, I believe, but in either case the result will be the same to his partner. Before two years, unless a miracle takes place, you will see Eldridge at least coming out at the little end of the horn. I could have told him this at first; but it was none of my business. I never meddle with things that don't concern me.'

'You know Dalton then?'

'I think I do.'

'Has he been in business before!'

'Yes, half a dozen times; and somehow or other, he has always managed to get out of it, with cash in hand, long enough before it broke down, to escape all odium and responsibility.'

'I'm sorry for Eldridge, he's a clever young man, and honest in the bargain.'

'Yes, and he has energy of character and some business talents. But he is too confiding. And here is just the weakness that will prove his ruin. He will put too much faith in his plausible associate.'

'Some one should warn him of his danger. Were I intimate enough to venture on the freedom, I would certainly do so.'

'I don't meddle myself with other people's affairs. One never gets any any thanks for the trouble he takes on this score. At least that is my experience! and moreover, it's about as much as I can do to take good care of my own business. This is every man's business.'

'I wish you had given the young man a word of caution before he was involved with Dalton.'

'I did think of doing so, but then I reflected that it was his look out and not mine.—Each man has to cut his eye-teeth for himself, you know.'

'True; but when we see a stumbling-block in the way of a blind man, or one whose eyes are turned in another direction, we ought at least, to utter a warning word. It seems to me that we owe that much good will to our fellows.'

'Perhaps we do. And I don't know that I would have been any harm if I had done as you suggest. However it is too late now.'

'I think not. A hint of the truth would put him on his guard.'

'I don't know.'

'O, yes it would.'

'I am not certain. Dalton is a most plausible man, and I am pretty sure that, in the mind of a person like Eldridge, he can inspire the fullest confidence. To suggest anything wrong, now, would not put him on his guard, and might lead the suggestet into trouble.' Much more was said on both sides, but no good result flowed from the conversation. Mr. Hueston did not hesitate to declare that he knew how it would all be in the end; but at the same time, said that it was none of his business, and that 'every man must look out for himself.'

The character of Dalton was, by no means, harshly judged by Mr. Hueston. He was at heart, a knave, yet a most cunning and specious one. Eldridge, on the contrary, was the very soul of integrity; and being thoroughly honest in all his intentions, it was hard for him to believe that any man who spoke fair to him, and professed to be governed by right principles, could be a scoundrel. With a few thousand dollars, his share of his father's estate, he had come to Boston for the purpose of commencing some kind of business, With creditable prudence, he entered the store of a merchant and remained there for a year in order to obtain a practical familiarity with trade. During this period he fell in with Dalton, who was in a small commission way that barely yielded him enough to meet his expenses.—Dalton was long in discovering that Eldridge had some cash, and that his ultimate intention was to engage in business for himself. From that time he evinced towards the young man a very friendly spirit, and soon found a good reason for changing his boarding-place, and making his home under the same roof with Eldridge. To win upon the young man's confidence was no hard matter. Before six months Dalton was looked upon as a generous minded friend, who had his interest deeply at heart. All his views in regard to business were freely communicated; and he rested upon the suggestions of Dalton with the confidence of one who believed that he had met a friend, not only fully competent to advise aright, but thoroughly unselfish in all his feelings.

Dalton possessed a large amount of business information, and was therefore, the very man for Eldridge; particularly as he was communicative. In conversation the latter obtained a great deal of information on subjects especially interesting to one who looked forward to engaging in some branch of trade for himself. One evening the two men sat conversing about business, as usual, when Eldridge said:

'It is time I was making some move for myself, bnt for my life, I can't come to any decision as to what I shall do.'

'It is better for a young man, if he can do so, to connect himself with some established house;' replied Dalton, to this. 'It takes time to make a new business, and not frequently a very long time.'

'I am aware of that, but I see no opportunity for an arrangement of the kind.' 'How much capital can you furnish?'—'Ten thousand dollars.' 'That's very good, and ought to enable you to make an arrangement somewhere. I don't know but I might be willing to give you an interest in my business. This however would require some reflection. I am turning out a very handsome surplus every year without at all crowding sail.' 'A commision ousiness?'

'Yes. I am agent for three or four manufactories, and effect some pretty large sales during the year. If I were able to make liberal cash advances, I could more than quadruple my business.'

'And of course your profits also!'

'Yes, that follows as a natural result.'

'Would ten thousand dollars be at all adequate for such a purpose!'—'It would help very much. Ten thousand dollars in cash is, you know, a basis of credit to nearly four times that sum.'

'Yes, I am aware of that.' 'Is your capital readily available!' inquired Dalton. 'Yes.—Since I have been in the city I have invested everything in government securities, as safe property, and readily converted into cash.'

'Very judicious.'

Dalton mused for some time.

'Yes,' he at length said, as if he had been thinking seriously of the effect of ten thousand dollars in his business 'The capital you have would put a new face on everyth ng. That's certain. Suppose you think the matter over, and I will do the same.'

I will, certainly. And I may say now, that there will hardly be any hindrance on my part to the arrangement, if you should see it to be advantageous all around.

Of course Mr. Dalton professed, after taking a decent time for pretending reflection, to see great advantages to all parties, in a business connection, which in due time was formed. But few of those who knew Eldridge were apprised of what he intended doing, and those who did know and were aware at the same time of Mr. Dalton's character, like Mr. Hueston, concluded to mind their own buiness.

And so, unwarned of the risk he was encountering, an honest and confiding young man was permitted to form a co-partnership with a villian, who had already been the means of involving three or four unsuspecting individuals in hopeless embarrassment.

Confident that he had entered the road to fortune, Eldridge commenced his new career. The capital he had supplied gave as Dalton had predicted, new life to the business, for the offer of liberal cash advances brought heavier consignments, and opened the way for more extensive operations. The general management of affairs was left, according to previous understanding, in the hands of the senior partner, as most competent for that department; while Eldridge gave up every energy of his mind to the practical details of the business, which, by the end of the year, had grown far beyond his anticipations.

Accepting large consignments of goods, upon which advances had to be made, requiring the raising of a great deal of money, and this Dalton managed to accomplish without calling away the attention of his partner from what he was engaged in doing. Thus matters went on for about three years, when Dalton began to complain of failing health, and to hint that he would be compelled to retire from active business. Eldridge said that he must not think of this, but his senior partner did think of it, very seriously. From that time his health appeared to break rapidly, and in a few months he formally announced his intention to withdraw.

Finding both remonstrance and persuasion of no avial, the basis of a disolution of the co-partnership was agreed upon, in which the value of the business itself, that would now be entirely in the hands of Eldridge, was rated high as an offset to a pretty large sum Which Dalton claimed as his share in the concern. Without due reflection, there a ballance of five thousand dollars to the credit of the firm in bank, which, by the way, was provided for special effect at the time, by the cunning senior, Eldridge consented that for his share in the busines, Dalton should be permitted to take bills receivable amounting to six thousand a check for two thousand, and his notes for ten thousand dollars payable in three to eighteen month. After all this was settled, a disolution of the co-partnership was publicly announced, and Eldridge, with some misgivings at heart, undertook the entire management of the business himself. It was but a very little while before he found himself embarrassed in making his payments. The withdrawal of two thousand dollars in cash, and six thousand in paper convertible into cash, created a serious disability. In fact, an earnest and thorough investigation of the whole business showed it to be so crippled that less than a miracle would enable him to conduct it on a safe issue. Nevertheless, still unsuspicious of the real truth, he resolved to struggle manfully for a triumph over the difficulties that lay before him, and overcome them, if there was any virtue in energy and perseverance.

The first point at which the business suffered, was in the loss loss of consignments. Inability to make the required advances turned from the warehouse of Eldridge large lots of goods almost weekly, the profits on the sales of which would have been a handsome addition to his income. At the end of three months, the first note of a thousand dollars held by Dalton, fell due and was paid. This was so much more taken from his capital.—Another month brought a payment of a like amount, and at the end of six months a thousand dollars more was paid. Thus Dalton had been able to get eleven thousand dollars out of the concern, although three years before he was not really worth a dollar, and there was still due him seven thousand dollars. By this time the eyes of Eldridge were beginning to open to the truth. Suspicion being once finally awakened, he entered upon a careful examination of the business, from the time of forming the co-partnership. This occupied him for some weeks before he was able to bring out a clear and comprehensive exhibit of affairs. Then he saw that he had been the victim of a specious and cunning scoundrel, and that so far from being worth a dollar, he had obligations falling due for over ten thousand dollars more than he had the means to pay.

A sad and disheartening result! And what added to the pain of Eldridge was the fact that he should have been so weak and shortsighted as to permit himself to be thus duped and cheated.

'I knew how it would be,' said Mr. Hueston coldly, he was told that Eldridge was in difficulties. 'Nothing else was to have been expected.'

'Why so!' inquired the person to whom the remarked was made.

'Every body knows Dalton to be a sharper. Eldridge in not his first victim.

'I did not know it.'

'I did, then; and prophesied just this result.'

'You!'

'Yes, certainly I did. I knew exactly how it must turn out. And here's the end, as I predicted.'

This was said with great self-complacency.

Soon after the conversation, a young man named Williams, who had only a year before married the daughter of Mr. Hueston, came into his store with a look of troble on his countenance. His business was that of an exchange broker, and in conducting it, he was using the credit of his father in law quite liberally.

'What's the matter,' inquired Mr. Hueston, seeing by the expression of the young man's face that something was wrong.

'Have you heard anything about Eldridge!' inquired William's, in an anxious voice.

'Yes, I understand that he is about making a failure of it, and, if so, it will be a bad one. But what has that to do with your affairs?'

'If he fails, I am ruined!' replied the young man, becoming greatly excited.

'You!' It was now Mr. Hueston's turn to exhibit a disturbed aspect.

'I hold seven thousand dollars of his paper.'

Seven thousand dollars!'

Yes.'

How in the name of wonder did it come into your possession?"

I took it from Dalton at a tempting discount.'

From Dalton! Then his name is on the paper!'

No. I hold it without recource.'

What folly! How could you have done such a thing?'

I believe Eldridge to be perfectly good. Dalton said that he was in a fair way of making a fortune.'

Why then, was he anxious to part with his p per!

'It was, he alleged, on account of ill health. He wished to close business and make an investment of what little he possessed, previous to going south, in the hope that a change of air would brace up his shattered constitution.'

It was all a lie!—the scoundrel! His health is as good as mine. A greater villain than he is, does not walk the earth. I wonder how you could have been so duped!'

How do you think Eldridge's affairs will turn out?" asked the young man.

Worse than nothing, I suppose. I understand that he paid Dalton some eighteen thousand dollars for his half of the business. There was ten thousands dollars capitol at first; and, from the way things were conducted, instead of its increasing, it must have diminished yearly.'

Here was an entirely new aspect in the case, Mr. Hueston's self-complacency was gone. He knew how it would be with Eldrige, from the first time; but he didn't know how it was going to be with himself. He didn't for a moment dream that when the fabric of the young man's fortune came falling around him, that anything belonging to him would be burried under the ruins.

Too bad! Too bad!' he ejaculated, as under a sense of the utter desperation of of the case, he struck his hands together, and then threw them above his head. But it did no good to fret and scold, and blame his son-in-law. The error had been committed, and it was now too late to retrace a step. Six or seven thousand dollars would be inevitably lost: and as Williams had no capital, originally, of his own, the money would have to come out of his pock et. The ruin of which the young man talked, was more in his imagination than anywhere else, as Mr. Hueston was able enough to sustain him in his difficulty.

In the winding up of the affairs of Eldridge, who stoped payment on the day William announced to his father-in-law the fact that he held his notes, everything turned out as badly as Mr. Hueston had predicted. The unhappy young man was almost beside himself with trouble, mortification and disappointment. Not only had he lost everything he possessed in the world; he was deeply involved in debt besides, and his good name was gone. A marriage contract into which he had entered, was broken off in consequence, the father of the lady demanding of him a release of the engagement in a way so insulting that the young man flung insult back gnashing his teeth and never after went near his house.

For months after the disastrous termination of his business, Eldridge lingered about the city in a miserable state of mind. Some friends obtained for him a situation as clerk, but he did not keep the place very long. It seemed almost impossible for him to fix his attention upon anything. His neglect of the interests of his employer was so apparent, that he was dismissed from his place at the end of a few months. This increased the morbid despondency under which he was laboring, and led to an almost total abandonment of himself. In less than a year, he was travelling swiftly along the road to utter ruin.

One day, it was just twelve months from the time of Eldridge's failure, Mr. Hueston stood conversing with a gentleman, when the unhappy young man went reeling by, so much intoxicated that he with difficulty kept his feet.

Poor fellow!' said the gentleman, in a tone of pity. 'He was badly dealt by.

There is no doubt of that,' returned Mr Hueston. 'Dalton managed his cards with his usual skill But I knew how it would be from the first. I knew that Dalton was a knave at heart, and would overreach him.'

You did!' was rejoined, with a look and tone of surprise.

O, yes. I predicted, from the begining, the very result that has come out.'

You warned the young man, of course.

No.'

What! Saw him in the hand of a sharper, and gave him no warning!'

I never meddle in other people's affairs I find as much as I can do to take proper care of my own.'

And yet, if common report is true, had you taken a little care of this young man, you would have saved six or seven thousands dollars for yourself.

That's my look-out,' said Mr. Hueston

You knew how it would be, resumed the gentleman, in a severe, rebuking voice and yet kept silence, permitting an honest confiding young man to fall into the clutches of a scoundrel. Mr Hueston, society hold you responsible for the ruin of one of her members—equally responsible with the knave who was the agent of the ruin. A word would have saved the young man but in your indifference and disregard of others' good, you would not speak that word. When next you see the miserable wreck of a human being that but just now went staggering past, remember the work of your own hands is before you.

And saying this, the man turned abrupt away, leaving Mr Hueston so much astonished and bewildered by the unexpected charge, as scarcely to comprehend where he was. Recovering himself in a moment or two, he walked slowly along, his eyes upon the ground. With what feelings, the reader may imagine.

A few days afterwards, his son-in-law, at his instance, went in search of Eldridge for the purpose of offering him assistance and making an effect to reclaim him. But alas! he was too late. Death had finished the work of ruin.'

WASHINGTON CITY D. C.

SATURDAY, JULY 21, ::::::::::1849.

MRS. MADISON IS NO MORE!

She departed this life on the 12th instant, between 10 and 11 o'clock P. M.—aged about 82. Having had the happiness of her acquaintance, we had written a short eulogy in honor of her virtues, but laid it aside, upon seeing that of the Intelligencer, herewith copy into our paper. It is one of the most beautiful specimens of compositios that ever fell from the pen of man, and every word true:

"Beloved by all who personally knew her, and universally respected, this venerable Lady closed her long and well-spent life with the calm resignation which goodness of heart combined with piety only can impart. It would seem an abuse of terms to say that we regret the departure of one so ripe and so fitted for a better world. But, in the case of this excellent lady, she continued until within a few weeks to grace society with her presence, and lend to it those charms with which she adorned the circles of the highest, the wisest, and best, during the bright career of her illustrious husband. Wherever she appeared, every one became conscious of the presence of the spirit of benignity and gentleness, united to all the attributes of feminine loveliness.—For ourselves, whose privilege it was to know and admire her through the last forty years of her life, it would not be easy to speak in terms of exaggeration of the virtues and winning manners of this eminent Lady. To attempt it would add no brightness to her fair name, and would be little needed to move the public sympathy. All of our own country and thousands in other lands will need no language of Eulogy to inspire a deep and sincere regret when they learn the demise of one who touched all hearts by her goodness and won the admiration of all by the charms of dignity and grace."

[CROWDED OUT OF LAST HUNTRESS]

MR. MALLETT.

This is the man that was suspected of being concerned in the whole plot, viz. stopping the books dispatched at various times, from early in the winter till late in the Spring; and for being privy to the origin of the fire, with the intention of destroying the books *

What gives strength to the suspicion is, that he was appointed chairman of the committee for distributing the money, made up in the North, for the citizens [which nearly if not quite covered their loss,] with orders no doubt to exclude our claim. How could these blue-law gentlemen of the East know we had claims there, or that this vandal Mallett was one of themselves, if it were not a concerted plot?

It was usual to allow us a parlor during our travels to receive company, but Mr. Mallett, though he lived in F. never called upon us—a bad sign; we met with him however, in passing through the stage-office—he was a dark, gloomy looking case, rather small in size—distant, and vulgar in his manners. He had jnst the countenance and down-look of a wretch who would be hired to do an act so base and cruel as to strip a widow of her substance. He was either an agent or part owner of the Southern mail line.† Therefore in justice to the people, such men ought to be reformed out of the government, and such no doubt was their object in electing Gen. Taylor.

In the preceding details relating to the General Post offices, we have had no invidious motive—we merely intended to show not only the prostration of morals throughout our country, but the astonishing increase of crime, and vice, and the deplorable state of society.—What has done this? What has produced this state of things?

As we have often said, it is the want of a proper system of education. Party spirit and politics, and that tyranny exercised over the mind by the bigotry of a certain class who by suppressing knowledge, and suffering ignorance to grow up in the rising generation, they have moulded the tender faculties of the American race, and drilled them to unresisting obedience to their sovreign will and pleasure—whether for good or for evil we cannot say; let those whom it most concerns beware, for it strikes us there is mischief at hand.

* Comprising about $1,000, and the loss of sale of the odd volumes, $500, this together with the loss of sale of the odd volumes was severe when added to other losses.

† We often met with these kind of men, they are generally from New England, and are smuggled into all the mail lines, and every mode of conveyance used for travelling, by the Church and State party, and act as pimps, and spies, upon the travelling community, noting down their language habits and wealth, but especially the HERITICS viz. Catholics, Unitarians, &c. &c., and make report to Head quarters. They followed us during the whole of our travels, "spreading the gospel" [tract.] all the way, hedious monsters, they are frightful, nor do they belie their trade.

COL. BENTON AGAIN.

It appears that Col. B's. expectations has been quite renovated since the Church and State party have commenced settling the affairs of the Nation.

"COL. BENTON AND THE TERRITORIAL QUESTION.

'The Missouri Senator may not triumph in his own State, in the conflict he is waging. The feeling against him there is strong, and he may be defeated. But one triumph he has certainly achieved, such as falls to few men in political life. He has conquered his bitterest and oldest adversaries, and extorted high eulogiums from men and presses who never had before, in his whole political career, a word of praise or sympathy for him,"—Nat. Era.

"Such as falls to few men in political life." This when applied to Dr. B's. friend, Benton is unfortunately for him, like Burns's Scotch Lassie:

"While govin' thus, the country 'cross,
I owre a stane fell headlang,
An' there I got a mark, will not
Be aff me till I'm dead-lang."

This is the drowning man catching at a straw:

"Strong must be the zeal for the Anti-Slavery restriction which brings Colonel Benton into such grace with the Whig organs of New England and New York. They return him public thanks of 'heartfelt gratitude and gladness' for having settled forever the exclusion of slavery from the soil of New Mexico and California."

There is no testimony wanting after this, to prove the principles of "Free Soilism."

Well, the Colonel must be on the high-road to fame now—he has the Barnburners, and the fanatics of New England on his side; and our brother the Doctor here, is a host himself, and of more force than all the rest. But say friend of the Era, 'think you can play out that game? see what they are doing in Missouri.

A SHOCKING PICTURE.

"PAUPERISM.—In the illustrated London News of the 24th of March there is an editorial headed 'Increase of Pauperism,' which states that the number of paupers in England in 1848, in round numbers, was one million eight hundred and seventy-six thousand, and in 1846, one million four hundred and seventy-one thousand, showing an increase in two years of four hundred and five thousand persons."—Picayune.

IRELAND.

The news from Ireland is still more appalling, as years accumulate upon us, they leave us more sensitive, until we are no longer able to read the accounts of distress and suffering, that reach us from that unhappy country. Is there no help for Ireland? are there no hearts of flesh in all mankind to feel for human beings, who are perishing by hundreds for bread!

We see reports of beef, butter, and even grain being exported from Ireland to England—can this be so? Alas! can any man, woman, or child, who has a heart, consent to such a cruel act! Better say to them, "take back your food, the labor of your hands and your high taxed-fields, eat it and live." Call ye these Christians? if so there must be two sorts of christians, for these are not mentioned in the New Testament, all the genuine christians we ever heard of fed the hungry, clothed the naked, and visited the sick.

We trust her Majesty the Queen, who is shortly to visit Ireland, may belong to the latter, and and that she may either give them the right to govern themselves, or send them bread. If her Majesty the Queen, understands the christian system of worship, rewards, and punishments agreeably to her own Church, she will not take the responsibility upon herself for the calamities of poor Ireland.

"ROYAL VISIT TO IRELAND.—The Queen proposes to embark in the royal yacht, to touch first at the Cove of Cork, and to proceed thence along the Irish Channel to Dublin, where she will remain for a few days the guest of his Excellency Lord Clarendon. Upon leaving Dublin the royal squadron will proceed northwards along the Irish coast to Belfast, and thence cross to Scotland. Although the precise period of her Majesty's visit cannot yet be fixed, it will probably take place early in August."—Philadelphia Messenger.

We hope the Queen may graciously extend her visit to the suffering districts of Ireland, and see for herself.

WHIPPING IN THE NAVY.

We are pleased to see some of our ablest Editors taking up this barbarous subject in earnest: Let any man make the case his own and do as he would be done by, This is the true way of judging: We know who they are that stands out for this bloody business! We trust the Phila. Post will continue to plead for those ill-treated men!

DR. TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA Most extraordinary Medicine in the world

This Extract is put in quart bottles. It is six times cheaper, pleasanter, and warranted superior to any sold. It cured diseases, without vomting, purging, sicng, or deblitating the patient.

The great beauty and superiority of this Sarsaparilla over all other remedies is, while it eradicates disease, it invigurates the body,

IT HAS PERFORMED MORE THAN 15.000 CURES THIS YEAR.

1,000 cures of Rheumatism.

1,000 cures of Dyspepsia.

2,500 cures of General Debility and Want of Nervous Energy.

30,000 Female Complaints, and over 7,000 cures of Diseases of the Blood viz:

Ulcers, scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, pimples on the face, &c., together with nerous cases of consumption liver coraplainst, aping affections, &c This, we are aware, must appear incredible, but we have letters from physicians and our agents from all parts of the United States informing us of extraordinary cures. R Van Buskirk, Esq., one of the most respectable druggists in Newark, New Jersey, informs us that he can refer to more than one hundred and fifty cases in that place alone. There are thousands of cases in the city of N. York which we will refer to with pleasure, and to men of character well known.

OPINIONS OF PHYSICIANS.

Dr. Townsend is almost daily receiving orders from physicians in different parts of the Union.

This is to certify that we, the undersigned physicians of the city of Albany, have, in numerous cases prescribed Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla and believe to be one of the most valuable preparations of Sarparilla in the Market.

Albany, April 1, 1845.

The following is from one of the most respectable physicians on Long Island:

GREENPORT July 19, 1846.

DR. TOWNSENDS—Dear Sir—It is with satisfaction that I have recently witnessed, in several cases the most beneficial results from your extract of Sarsaparilla. Be engaged in the practice of medicine, I have prescribed it in several cases, and never without benefit. In the removal of diseases arising from a deranged state of the disgestive organs, jaundice, &c if far excee any thing of the kind ever offered to the public. You will please send me two dozen, &c.

Respectfully yours,
C, S, PRESTON, M D.

UNITED STATES OFFICER.

Capt G W McLean, Member of the Legislature, and late of the U. S. Navy; has kindly sent us the following certificate. It tells its own story.

RAHWAY Jan. 25 1847.

A year since I was taken with the influenza and my whole system left in a debilitated state. I was induced to try Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla, and after taking two or three bottles, I was very much relieved, and attributed it entirely to the said Sarsaparilla: I have continued taking it and that I improve every day. I believe it save my life, and would not be without it under any consideration.

G W. McLEAN.

SCROFULA CURED.

This certificate conclusively proves that this Sarsaparilla has perfect control over the most obstinate diseases of the blood. Three persons cured in one house is unprecedented,

THREE CHILDREN.

DR. TOWNSEND Dear Sir, I have the pleasure to inform you that three of my children have been cured of the scrofula by the use of your excellent medecine. They were afflicted very severely with bad sores; having taken only four bottles; it took them away, for which I feel myself under deep obligation.

yours respectfully,
ISAAC W. CRAIN, 108 Woost

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST!

A MAMMOTH PAPER.

DEVOTED TO MORALITY, PURE LITERATURE, FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC NEWS, AGRICULTURE, SCIENCE, ART AND AMUSEMENT.

This paper contains from one-fourth to one half more than the generality of two Dollar city weeklies.

The Proprietors of the SATURDAY EVENING POST return their sincere thanks to their friends and the public for the patronage extended to them since the enlargement of their paper, and respectfully solicit a continuance of the same. The belief expressed in their last Prospectus, that the POST is destined to take its stand at the very head of the weekly press, is fast becoming realized. The reason of this is in a great degree, to be found in the stand the POST has always taken against the immoral literature of the day. The public have felt, in the language of the North American and United States Gazette, of this city, that "The Post has done much towards correcting the taste of the newspaper reading public."

TERMS.

The terms to single subscribers are 2,00 dols per annum, in advance, 3,00; if not paid in advance. For five dollars in advance, one copy will be sent three years.

TERMS TO CLUBS.

In order to accommodate the large number who wish to take a first class paper, but mistakingly think they cannot afford it, we continue the following low terms for Clubs—to be sent, in the city, to one address, and, in the country, to one Post Office:

A NEW PAPER MAMMOTH SIZE

Reduced price, Increased Beauty,

AND AUGMENTED INTEREST!!

The undersigned having purchased the disputed claim on the old Saturday Courier, and being determined not to be surpassed in the competition among the press For popularity beauty and excellence, will now combine the unrivaled and unapproachable material of the old paper, with the renewed energy enterprise novelty and spirit of a new one and will issue, on the 11th day of March, 1848 in the city of Philadelphia the first number of a new weekly Newspaper, of the very first and largest class, entitled

M'MAKIN'S MODEL,
AMERICAN COURIER

Published and edited by ANDREW M'MAKIN now editor of the Saturday Courier,

Assisted by a gentleman, universally acknowledged as one of the most talented and popular writers of the age.

The farmers Department, of the Courier will be edited. It is expected, by the most distinguished Agriculturist in the united States, whose name will be announced as soon as the pending negotiations are contempleted.

THE AMERICAN COURIER

Will contain the amount of eight more columns of matter than does the "Saturday Courier," and it will be conducted strictly on the CASH PRINCIPEL, will, with all its Artistic and literary improvements, be offered at a much reduced price to "Clubs,"

The editor of the American courier feels confident that not a pledge will be required of time to the character of the new paper, other than that it will be a family newspaper, neueral in politics and religion; chaste in morality and moderate but elevated in tone and sentiment. His long connection with the "Saturday courier,"—which, under at least his co editor ship, reached the largest similar circulation in the world,—will be ample pledge that every intelligent and respectable family in the land may safely confide in his taste, judgment and energy, with the aid of comparatively unlimited capital, to cater for their mental appetite

The contents of the American Courier.

Among the standard features of the american courier, will be—a new series of 'Washington Legends,' by George Lippard, esq. The 'portrait Gallery' of poets and their poetry—each Biography illustrated, Original domestic tales, by themost distinguished writers of the day. Original essays, sketches, poems and letters on useful and important subjects. engraved views of persons, scenes and things of interest Select tales from the best english and american authors. The "Modern Spectator, in wich it will be designed to

"eye nature's walk, shoot Folly as it flies and catch the manners living as they rise
Together with every useful novelty that ingenuity, skill and talent can advise.

THE FARMERS DEPARTMENT will immediately take and maintain an originality and value not approachable by any family journal in the land the editor having engaged several writers of known and acknowledged ability to furnish practical articles on model farming.

The markets, news and gossip of the day will be objects of special care in detail, and nothing will be left undone by mind or money.

G. BROOKE & CO

Would respectfully inform the citizens of Washington, Georgetown and Alexandria, and the public generally that they have made such arrangements with the publishers and others as to enable them to offer inducements to subscribers and others, that are not to be met with at any other establishment in the District:

From their long and familiar acquaintancewith the business in this city, they feel confident that they can give satisfaction to all customers who may be pleased to favor them with a call, and they assure subscribers and public that no pains will be spared tomake the Literary, depot corner of Pennsylvania avenue and fourteenth street, equal to any establishment of the kind south of New York.

TO THE FRIENDS OF "THE PLOUGH LOOM, AND ANVIL."

POPULAR as this journal is, and so far successful beyond any heretofore established, its income is yet something short of paying its own expenses, leaving the editors to live on air or hope, neither of which is very substantial deit. Now, as we believe that we have not a friend who would willingly see the man want bread who has been more than thirty years teaching others how to make it, we at once frankly solicit our present patrons to use their influence to average one more subscriber each, and then "the Plough, the Loom, and the Anvil," and those who are working at it, will be doing what is commonly called a safe business, and not until then. We are truly sorry to be under the necesity of making this appeal, for, could we afford it, we would rejoice, as on past occasions. to show that we would most willingly work as hard, gratuitously for the great industrial interests of the country, as we are now doing in the hope of at least a scanty support.

P. S. We shall not fail to note the favor if any kind brother Editor should give this a place in his paper to help along one of the oldest of the fraternity.

TERMS of the PLOUGH, LOOM, and ANVIL, $10 for five subscribers, $5 for two, and $3 for one, or $5 for two years subscription, 64 pages a month.

THE GLOBE,

Congressional, Agricultural, and Literary Newspaper.

The Editors of the Congressional Globe propose a new publication. To deserve the patronage which Congress has accorded to their reports of its debates, in receiving and making the Globe the official register, they intend to add promptitude to whatever merit has hitherto recommended the work. They will publish a Daily Globe, to record the proceedings and debates as they occur, and a Congressional Globe periodically as heretofore embodying the reports of Congress separate from the miscellaneous matter which will accompany them in the daily print. To fill the sheet of the daily newspaper, it is designed to gather the news from all quarters, and complete the contents by drawing from every source what ever may be of most interest among literary novelties, and of greatest utility in science, art, or agriculture. For material the leading journals and periodicals of France and Great Britain, treating of such subjects will be consulted and it is hoped, advantageously used. Original essays, especially on topics connected with agriculture, will be obtained from the most enlightened and practical men of our country.

The Globe as a newspaper, and as a vehicle of information and amusement in other respects will be under the charge of Francis P. Blair and James C. Pickett. The Congressional department and business concerns of the paper will be under the management of John C. Rives. The public are familiar with Blair and Rives as connected with the press. In introducing Mr Pickett as one of the concern they will be allowed to say a few words of him. He is a gentleman favorably known to the Government, for the talent and judgment which distinguished his diplomatic service while connected with the mission to Quito, and more recently when charge d'Affaires to Peru. From him mainly the Globe will derive the selections and translations from the foreign continental journals and periodicals, the comments on them and the other literary articles which will be found among its chief attractions. F. P. Blair will give his attention principally to the English periodicals.

The Globe will be published daily during the session of Congress and weekly the balance of the year and will undergo distribution in the form of a Weekly Globe, a Congressional Globe and Appendix.

The Weekly Globe will contain agricultural and miscellaneous articles.

The Congressional Globe will embody as it has done for the last sixteen years Congressional proceedings and debates exclusively.

The Appendix will embrace the revised speeches separately and the messages of the President of the United States and the reports of the Heads of the Executive Departments.

The Congressional Globe and appendix will be published as fast as the proceedings of Congress will make a number. Subscribers may expect one number of each a week during the first four weeks of a session and two or three numbers of each a week afterwards, until the end of the session.

Complete indexes to the Congressional Globe and appendix, will besent to subscribers soon after Congress adjourns.

TERMS.

For one copy of the Daily Globe daily during the session of Congress, and weekly during the recess, a year,	$5 00
For one copy of the Weekly Globe one year,	1 00
For one copy of the Congressional Globe during the present session, if subscribed for before the first of January,	1 00
For one copy of the Appendix during the present session, if subscribed for before the first of January,	1 00
For six copies of either the Congressional Globe or the appendix, or part of both,	5 00

The subscription for the Congressional Globe or the Appendix after the 1st of January will be $1 50. The original price of one dollar does not pay the expense of the publications in consequence of the great increase of matter published.

BLAIR & RIVES,

Washington, December 5, 1848.
